Automobile Hits Carriage

An automobile accident occurred on Andover hill shortly after eight o'clock last night when the machine struck a buggy driven by a young man from Lawrence, resulting in a pair of broken shafts and a broken radiator.

The accident was caused by the fact that the automobile driver was blinded for a moment by the search light of an electric car going in the opposite direction, and if the machine had been going at a greater speed than it happened to be at the time, without doubt the smash would have been a serious one. A young lady was riding with the driver of the buggy and she escaped without a scratch, while the young man suffered a badly bruised arm, besides having his clothes ruined.

The automobile was a large Buick of the racing type. It carried a racing number, two, and those who saw it are sure that if it had struck the carriage at great speed, there would have been nothing left but kindling wood. The horse was uninjured but broke away from the shafts, pulling the driver over the dash-board and landing him in the road.

The automobile driver did all he could to settle the damages caused by the accident. He towed the carriage to Morrissey's stable and then gave himself up to the police. No charge was entered against him however as he satisfied the officers that the accident was unavoidable. After a settlement of damages with the carriage owner, he proceeded to Boston.

LIBERALS ARE TO DINE LEADER

Resentment Manifested at Recent Treatment of Premier

KING WATCHES SITUATION

King George to Appoint 500 Additional Peers Immediately—Unionists Interrupted by Liberals—Movement on Foot to Tender Austen Chamberlain eand Lord Selborn Leadership of the Unionist Party

London, July 26.—Following the meeting of the cabinet, it was reported that a decision had been reached by the government and King George to create 500 new peers immediately.

Unionists who shouted down Premier Asquith in the house of commons were interrupted by Liberals when they attempted to address the house.

Supporters of the government gave a very fair imitation of the tumultuous scenes when the Unionists attempted to speak upon issues at stake.

One result of the remarkable scene of disorder when Premier Asquith was hooted and jeered is an increase of sympathy and support for home rule for Ireland. The anti-home rule men were among the principal offenders in the demonstration which forced the premier to adjourn the sitting and their actions met with strong disapproval.

There is a report in circulation here that there is a well defined conspiracy among the more radical Tories to depose Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne from the leadership of the Unionist party. The proposal is to substitute for them Austen Chamberlain and Lord Selborne.

King George is watching the situation closely and is using his influence to bring about a settlement.

The demonstration was wholly unexpected and all Conservatives recognize that their party is facing an extreme crisis—one which may leave it, instead of a strong minority, a hopeless minority.

The extremists in the Unionist party propose to give a show of their strength in the dinner to the Earl of Halsbury. If the party splits as a result of the present situation the extremists probably will make the Earl of Selborne their leader. They find their chief inspiration in Joseph Chamberlain.

While the "last ditchers" are making the most noise, the real influential members of the Conservative party stand with Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Balfour for a peaceful solution. These include almost all the members of the last Conservative cabinet.

The Liberal leaders are planning a demonstration which probably will take the form of a great dinner in Mr. Asquith's honor to express resentment at his treatment.

Brockton, Mass., July 25.—Miss Margaret Hendrigan, aged 18, sneezed several times last Wednesday and several times each day until Saturday, when she was taken seriously ill. She was near to death, but has fully recovered.

Miss Hendrigan thought she had hay fever and did not pay much attention to the fact that she sneezed so frequently. When she was taken ill a physician was called and he diagnosed the case as concussion of the brain, due to sneezing.

The girl's head was packed in ice in an effort to save her life and the remedy proved effective. The sneezing ceased and she is once more able to be about.

MYSTERIOUS FISH PLAGUE

Experts Around Lake Erie Are Investigating the Matter

Buffalo, July 25.—A mysterious plague, which baffles experts on fish, is killing thousands of blue pike and dead fish are are being washed ashore in Lake Erie in great numbers.

H. C. Crossley is making an investigation. He finds that the small fish are dying from a fungus growth on the gills. The large fish are not affected. The unusually low temperature of the water is believed to be one of the causes.

AMBITIOUS CLIMBER MEETS DEATH IN ALPS

His Remains Are Discovered In the Crevice of a Glacier

Boston, July 25.—The body of Homer Diman, the former Arlington boy who has been lost in the Alps since July 5, was found imbedded in the ice in the crevice of a glacier, according to cablegrams.

The youth, who was 18 years old, was ambitious to climb the Alps. It was evident that the boy had attempted to leap a crevice and had failed, falling into the crevice, where he was killed.

A NEW GERMAN INVENTION

Patent Taken For Pistol Which Produces Apparent Death

Berlin, July 24.—An inventive German has taken out a patent for a pistol for producing apparent death for a brief time. It is loaded with a bullet made of a chemical composition, to which is added enough powder to propel it.

The bullet explodes and causes a thick cloud of vapor, which envelopes the victim, makes it impossible for him to see, renders his breathing difficult, and he finally falls into a swoon that lasts from twenty minutes to a half hou.

BOMB IN MILK CANS

Discovery Made of "Black Hand" Work on New York Ferryboat

New York, July 25.—Police patrol boats and fire tugs were sent up the North river by the explosion of a Black Hand bomb on board the ferryboat Netherland.

The bomb had been placed in a milk can, which was part of the cargo of a milk van on it from an Italian dairy company's depot on the lower East Side. The side of the van was blown out, milk and fragments of the steel cans were scattered over the boat and a wagon load of chickens was thrown overboard by the explosion.

They Insisted on Brevity.

The Spartans were distinguished for the brevity and conciseness of their speech. On one occasion during a terrible famine the inhabitants of an island in the Aegean sea sent an ambassador to Sparta, who made a speech imploring its aid. He had hardly finished before the Spartans sent him back these words, "We did not understand the end of your speech and have forgotten the beginning."

The poor, starving people chose another spokesman and impressed upon him to make his request as brief as possible. He therefore took with him a quantity of sacks, opened one before the assembly and said simply, "It is empty; fill it."

The sack was filled as well as the others, but the chief of the assembly said as he dismissed the ambassador, loaded with meal: "It wasn't necessary to inform us that the sack was empty. We saw it ourselves. Neither was it necessary to request us to fill it. We should have done it on our own account. Be less long winded next time."

Just What He Wanted.

The superintendent of the capitol and its grounds at Washington was walking along one of the corridors in the house office building one day when a greenhorn congressman, stewing with rage, grabbed him by the sleeve.

"What's the matter?" asked the superintendent, observing the man's emotion.

"Matter!" shouted the congressman. "Why, when I went into my office last evening there was a brand new typewriter on the desk. Now it's gone. You've got a lot of thieves around here."

The official walked into the office and without a word lifted the trap cabinet of the desk and brought the typewriter into view.

"Fine!" commented the congressman. "Now, have you got a place like that in here for my use when troublesome constituents knock on the door?"—Washington Star.

Punctuation in Piano Playing.

A joke is going the rounds of the press about the girl whose music teacher wished to compliment her, but of whom he could only say that she played the rests excellently. This is, however, real praise of a sort, for it is not every young student of music who is careful about playing the rests well. Indeed, a great many players seem to forget that the rests are just as much of the piece as is the punctuation in a sentence. Nowadays people do not put in so much punctuation as they used to do, but the pauses in the voice are there just the same and are readily understood by good readers and always regarded. The rests in music are like the pauses in reading that are needed to give expression to the sentences. If the player slights the rests or extends them too long the whole effect of the musical sentence is spoiled.—Christian Science Monitor.

Fest Versus the Pen.

In speaking of personal recollections of Dion Boucicault, Henry Miller dwells upon his superb skill as a stage director and tells of the following incident, which occurred during his first rehearsal under Boucicault:

"I went to him direct from Augustin Daly's management. Daly coached his players to cross and recross the stage during the progress of the play, with the idea that this continual moving about of the actors created dramatic action. During my first rehearsal I made a 'Daly cross' as I spoke one of my lines.

"'Why did you do that?' Boucicault asked in his quaint, quizzical manner.

"I explained that I imagined it would keep the scene moving.

"'Thanks, my boy,' said Boucicault dryly, 'but if I cannot interest the audience with my pen I don't think you can with your feet.'"

Bulldogs and Bulls.

Bulldog is so called because of his native antipathy to the bull. A thoroughbred bull pup as young as six months the first time he beholds a bull will run at the head, which is his invariable point of attack, and, seizing the horned beast by the lip, tongue or eye, hang on despite every attempt to detach him. The dog will even suffer himself to be killed or dismembered rather than relax his hold.—New York Telegram.

Protest.

"I beg pardon," said the new arrival, "but it seems to me it's excessively warm here."

"Eh! What?" snorted Satan. "Evidently you forget where you are. This place is meant to be warm."

"Quite so, but there's such a thing as overdoing it."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Eager For Information.

An American took a friend, an Englishman, to a theater. An actor in the farce, about to do the dying act, exclaimed, "Please, dear wife, don't bury me in Yonkers!"

The Englishman turned to his friend and said, "I say, old chap, what are yonkers?"—Everybody's.

The Usual Result.

"Yes, Charlie is as brave as a stack of lions. Did you hear about his daring a policeman to arrest him?"

"No! Gee, what happened?"

"He was arrested."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

China as a Bluffer.

Professor Ian C. Hannah in his book, "Eastern Asia—A History," says that taxicabs, or, rather, automatic registers attached to horse cabs, were invented about 630 A. D., during the Tang dynastry in China. In his opinion the Chinese empire is "the greatest bluff in the world," and it suggests to him a very ancient Chinese fable, which he relates.

A monkey was captured by a tiger. He whined that he was thin and his flesh of poor taste, but he knew of a fine fat donkey for the tiger. The tiger consented to be led to where the donkey was tied. When the donkey saw them coming he was frightened, but recovered his composure and bawled in his masterful donkey voice:

"Monkey, you used to bring me two tigers. Why only one today?"

The tiger did a record hustle back to the jungle.

China, says Professor Hannah, has shown much of that donkey's resourcefulness in its history.

Two Women.

In her book "Woman and Labor" Olive Schreiner gives an amusing illustration of the fact that it is not the amount of money a person has which makes him or her a parasite on society, but the way it is used.

"The wife of an American millionaire," says Mrs. Schreiner, "was visited by a woman, the daughter and widow of a small professional man. She stated that she was in need of both food and clothing. The millionaire's wife gave her a leg of mutton and two valuable dresses. The woman proceeded to whine, though in vigorous health, that she had no one to carry them home for her. The American, the descendant of generations of able, laboring, New England Puritan women, tucked the leg of mutton under one arm and the bundle of clothes under the other and walked off down the city street toward the woman's dwelling, followed by the astonished pauper parasite."

The Size of Some Stars.

M. Nordmann of the Paris observatory believes that he has devised a successful method of determining the diameters of stars by a comparison of their effective temperatures with their parallaxes. In the case of some of the brightest stars he has reached interesting results. Thus he finds that Aldebaran, the bright star in Taurus, is veritably a giant sun, the ratio of its diameter to that of our sun being greater than that of the sun to the planet Jupiter. This means that Aldebaran has a diameter probably not less than 8,000,000 miles, or more than thirty times the distance from the earth to the moon. On the other hand, Sirius, or the dog star, to our eyes the brightest of all the stars, is, according to M. Nordmann, but little larger than our sun.

Juggernaut.

Juggernaut—or "lord of the world"—was supposed to be one of the incarnations of Krishna. The idol is formed of an irregular pyramidal black stone, with two large diamonds to represent eyes. The nose and mouth are painted vermilion. An immense number of pilgrims visit the idol annually, reaching up into the millions. Juggernaut worship used to be a terrible thing, but it is not what it once was. The state allowance to the temple was suspended by the Indian government in 1851, and the festivals are growing less and less popular year by year. The growing intelligence of the people and the restraining influence of the government are doing their work, and Juggernaut is steadily losing ground.—New York American.

Tea Tremens.

"I used to be a tea taster in Hankow," said a New York tea dealer, "but I got a bad attack of tea tremens and had to give up the job. Tea tremens is a recognized disease among Chinese tea tasters. These men don't swallow a drop of tea from one week's end to another. They simply hold the tea in the mouth, get an idea of its aroma and then eject it, but nevertheless the aroma of the tea causes violent nervous attacks, with sleeplessness and even hallucinations that are known all over China as tea tremens. I have never had delirium tremens, but if it's one-half as bad as the tea sort I pity the poor victim."

When a Soft Drink Is Hard.

"You are arrested on a very serious charge, my good man," began the court, looking at the man severely. "You are accused of getting into a fight and hitting the complainant over the head with a bottle. What have you to say for yourself?"

"Your honor, I didn't mean to hurt him. I never thought that it would hurt him very much, 'cause the bottle contained nothing but a soft drink," returned the prisoner.—Milwaukee Free Press.

The Timid One.

An officer in the army, noted for his bravery, laughed at a timid woman because she was alarmed at the noise of a cannon when a salute was fired. The brave officer subsequently married that timid woman, and six months afterward he took off his boots in the hall when he came in late at night.—London Telegraph.

One Virtue.

HE'D SEEN IT BEFORE
(Puck)

In a "Touring Europe" party was a member named McCarthy,
Who had never been away from home before;
And though all his prior travel had been on the country gravel,
Yet to him the whole trip seemed an awful bore.
At last one day we asked him, and in manner gentle taxed him,
To inform us why the journey seemed so slow;
Then he gave this explanation, to our mighty consternation:
"I have seen it at the moving-picture show."

Well, we showed him every wonder, but he treated us like dunder-
Heads, he constantly felt more and more ennui;
What we thought must sure impress him only managed to distress him,
And he rested while we raved about Paree.
Up the highest Alps we took him, but emotion never shook him
As he gazed ten thousand feet to depths below;
And he said (it was heartrending, as on ropes we were descending):
"I have seen it at the moving picture show."

Once some brigands bold entrapped us, took our coin and then kidnapped us
And at point of knives were leading us away,
When McCarthy, little hero, grabbed a gun and cool as Nero,
Plugged the low-browed scoundrels a la U. S. A.
Then we wrung his hand and kissed him, but our gratitude all missed him:
"Why," said he, "that's very common, don't you know,
"In at least a dozen cities, and with phonographic ditties,
"I have seen it at the moving-picture show."

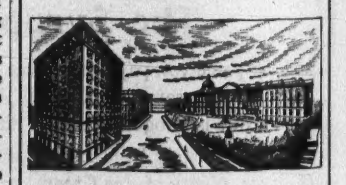

So we gave it up despairing, for the effort was too wearing,
And we figured that we'd all be old and gray
Ere we found, within earth's borders, anything those film-recorders
Couldn't show him for a nickel every day.
And if e'er the pearly portal opens to this pampered mortal,
As I trust it will when he is done below,
I believe he'll tell St. Peter, the alleged official greeter:
"I have seen it at the moving-picture show!"

HOW THE TRUST HANDLES TRADE

Ex-Attorney-General Bonaparte Now Wanted by Investigautrs

HARVESTER COMPANY'S CASE

The House Steel Investigating Committee Probing Into the Townsend Report—Charges Made to Bonaparte While in Office During Roosevelt Administration—What Is Said by Chairman Stanley

Washington, July 27.—Another document of sensational interest was laid before the Stanley steel trust investigating committee. It was a report by Burdette Townsend to former Attorney General Bonaparte on the International Harvester company, the so-called trust. The report showed that the United States Steel corporation allowed rebates of $3 a ton to the harvester company, and Mr. Stanley declared that it indicated that the giant steel corporation and the harvester trust were practically one.

The charges made to former Attorney General Bonaparte during his term of office that the United States Steel corporation gave refunds of $3 per ton to the harvester combine companies, was revealed to the committee. Chairman Stanley introduced in the proceedings a voluminous copy of the Townsend report. Mr. Townsend was a special investigator of the department of justice.

Mr. Stanley announced that a subpoena had been issued for Bonaparte, who is now in Canada, and that an effort would be made to ascertain from him and from other government officials why there never was any prosecution of the International Harvester company upon Townsend's charges.

Mr. Stanley also announced his intention of endeavoring to show a close connection between the United States Steel corporation and the International Harvester company, and as a basis for future inquiry he had read into the record the names of the directors of both corporations, the same being identical in many instances.

Mr. Townsend's report was exhaustive, going into the entire history of the harvester companies involved and the organization of the international in 1902. The steel committee will call attention to the forming of the steel trust the year before.

A feature of the report which the steel inquirers lay stress upon is that the International Harvester company sells to the foreign trade at a cheaper price than the domestic trade. It sells machines of all kinds for export, delivered at New York, at the same price for which they are sold to domestic purchasers f. o. b. Chicago. This makes a difference of from $6 to $10 per machine.

Attorney General Wickersham testified that he had never seen the Townsend report until now. He did not know why the harvester case was not pressed in 1908-09.

United States Senator Kenyon of Iowa, former assistant attorney general, and Herbert K. Smith, commissioner of corporations, also testified.

Port au Prince, Hayti., July 27.—The situation of the government is desperate. With the exception of the capital the whole republic is in revolt.

EXPEND LARGE AMOUNTS

Fabulous Sums of Money Spent Annually by Women

Madison, Wis., July 21.—More than $10,000,000,000 is spent in the United States annually for food, shelter and clothing, and 90 percent of this vast sum is spent by women who have no adequate knowledge of money values. These statements are made in a bulletin issued at the University of Wisconsin.

In any other phase of life, it is pointed out, the persons intrusted with such expenditures would be required to pass through a rigid system of training.

Chasing Butterflies, Meets Death

Cambridge, Mass., July 21.—The efforts of little Charles Drage of 799 Cambridge street, to catch a butterfly in front of his home caused him to run nder the wheels of a heavy caravan which was passing and resulted in his receiving injuries which caused his death at the Cambridge hospital shortly after.

DENIED MAIL PRIVILEGES

Misscellaneous Complaints Against Postoffice Authorities

Washington, July 27.—The sensational charge has been made that Leonard Goodwin, brother of Russell P. Goodwin, assistant attorney general for the postoffice department, was exploiting mail order houses, telling them he could arrange any trouble they might have through a denial of mail privileges, etc.

The charge was made by E. G. Lewis, who was denied certain mail privileges. Lewis said a Rochester, N. Y., man had written to him that Goodwin was the man he ought to employ to get him out of his troubles with the postoffice inspectors.

One of the detectives told Lewis, so the latter testified, that postoffice officials and inspectors at St. Louis had told him they would be upheld by the department in whatever methods they used to put Lewis out of business.

ALLIGATOR CARRIES WATCH

Timepiece Said to Belong to Georgia Girl Long Missing

Forsyth, Ga., July 27.—The finding of a valuable gold watch and chain in the stomach of a large alligator is believed to solve the disappearance of 12-year-old Janet Thornton.

The alligator was captured by J. M. Jackson. When last seen the little girl was standing on the bank of the lake where Jackson captured the aligator wearing a gold watch with her initials engraved on the back. The same initials are on the back of the watch discovered inside the alligator.

It is believed by Jackson and others that while the girl was playing on the bank of the lake the alligator came up on the bank and devoured her. The parents of the girl have been notified.

PRESIDENT ASSUMES ALL RESPONSIBILITY

Special Message Issued on the "Controller Bay Affair."

Washington, July 27.—President Taft has sent a special message to the senate shouldering full responsibility for opening for settlement and development 12,800 acres of the Chugach national forest reserve in Alaska—an incident which has become to be known as the "Controller Bay Affair."

In concluding he brands the now famous "Dick to Dick" postscript as a "wicked fabrication" and says that Charles P. Taft, whose name appeared in the alleged postscript, "has no interest in Alaska, never had, and knows nothing of the circumstances connected with this transaction."

Moreover, the president adds, his brother does not even remember that he ever ment Richard S. Ryan, representing the Controller Railway and Navigation company.

BODY FOUND IN SECTIONS

Remains of Human Body Discovered In Surf at Long Beach

Long Beach, L. I., July 26.—Floating in the surf here, a dismembered right leg was found.

The limb is of extraordinary size. Those who inspected it say that the leg was severed by some one experienced with a surgeon's knife.

Following the discovery of the leg, was found a large section of the right back of the same body. A section of rib in which showed through the flesh was cut cleanly as though by a saw. A liver was also discovered floating near the beach by sojourners at the resort, but it drifted out with the ebbing tide before it could be recovered.

Physicians state that the flesh has been in the water probably about a week or ten days.

TWO ARE KILLED BY MILL WORKER

Five Others Wounded on Board Crowded Car In Motion

THE DESPERADO CAPTURED

And Handed Over to Authorities at Adams—Whole Neighborhood Excited and Culprit Barely Escapes Lynching—Perpetrator a Young Syrian and Said to Be Half Crazed—Will Not Talk of Deed

Adams, Mass., July 24.—A young woman and a man were shot and instantly killed, five more women were dangerously wounded and other men, women and children were terrorized here by Fablo Mallak, a young mill worker, who poured ten shots into the helpless passengers on an electric car.

The thrilling tragedy took place between here and North Adams. This whole section of the state has been shocked at the mad act of the apparently crazed young man, who barely escaped lynching before he fell into the hands of the police and was locked up.

As he fired the last of the ten shots Mallak was seized and disarmed. He then drew a knife and jumped down an embankment.

A score or more of men leaped from the car and followed him. As he appeared in an open field one of the men threw a stone which struck Mallak and he dropped his knife and fell. Before he could rise the crowd of men were on him and he was securely bound.

Calls to North Adams brought the police, doctors and an ambulance. The doctors found that Motorman Hoyt had been shot through the back and instantly killed. Martha Esler was shot through the heart and instantly killed. The dead girl's sister received a bullet wound in her left arm.

Victoria Sovie, aged 21, was almost unconscious with a bullet wounr in her thigh.

Mrs. Stephen L. A. Hall received a bullet through the right shoulder which is feared will prove fatal. Mrs. Alice Bryant, aged 34, was shot in the neck, and is also probably fatally injured. The fifth woman to receive bullet wounds was Miss Kate Shea, aged 38, who received a bullet in the left arm.

All of the injured were hurried to North Adams and placed in a hospital. Mallak was taken to the North Adams police station and locked up, but later turned over to the Adams police.

Motorman Hoyt was heard to speak to Mallak, cautioning him about getting off the car and telling him to get back to his eat. Meanwhile the car was slowing down, and just before it came to a dead stop Mallak pulled out a 38-calibre revolver. He aimed the first bullet at the back of the motorman and then turned upon the women passengers and fired point blank till his revolver was emptied.

THE WILEY PAPERS

Documents Tendered President Taft by Secretary Wilson

Washington, July 26.—Secretary Wilson brought the papers in the case of Dr. Wiley to the White House. He refused to say what recommendations he had made regarding the charges against the pure food expert.

Mr. Wilson had an opportunity to discuss the Wiley case with the president. He said that he did not know whether his recommendation would be acceptable to the president or not.

If the recommendations made were not agreeable to the president he could change them. It was inferred from Mr. Wilson's remarks that his recommendations were not favorable to Dr. Wiley. There is every reason to believe, however, that Wiley at worst will receive but a mild reprimand.

CRANBERRY CROP IN DANGER

A Big Shortage Is Looked For In This Industry at Harwich

Harwich, Mass., July 24.—The recent drouth has badly damaged the cranberry crop of Cape Cod, according to reports received from all parts of the cape.

WILLIAM J. GAYNOR

In Controversy With the Head of Harvard

GAYNOR SCORED

Another Shot by Friend of the Head of Harvard University

Cambridge, Mass., July 26.—Another shot in the battle between Mayor Gaynor of New York and President Lowell of Harvard concerning the New York board of education was fired by C. C. Little. Mr. Little is secretary to the Harvard corporation.

On behalf of the president Little answers Mayor Gaynor's accusation that President Lowell has suppressed the former's communication with a statement to the effect that the president had not published the mayor's letter "because it contained some things that were hardly creditable to the mayor."

Mr. Little characterized Mayor Gaynor's charge that the president was unfair in the whole controversy as "childish."

GREAT GAIN IN YIELD OF WHEAT IN ILLINOIS

Experiment With Phosphorous Fertilizer Proves Good

Champaign, Ills., July 27.—The greatest gains by soil treatment that the world has ever known have been made on the University of Illinois experiment.

When wheat threshing ended the expectations of the state experts were exceeded. By the use of phosphorus fertilizer the yield was more than doubled. The average yield on the fertilized plots was 58½ bushels. This is an average gain of 34½ bushels an acre.

VESSEL FOUND FLOATING

Searchers Are Confident It Is Wreck of Gloucester Fishing Vessel

Gloucester, Mass., July 27.—A Gloucester fishing vessel is floating, with one spar out of water and the hull ten feet below the surface, forty-seven miles southeast of Halifax, a serious menace to navigation.

It was found that the spar, which was a mainmast, was attached to the whole hull of a vessel, and that hull but ten feet below the surface. They rowed all over the spot where the hull lay, and although they were unable to make out the name of the craft, they are convinced they were looking down on the wreck of a Gloucester fishing vessel.

MYSTERY IN CASE

Disappearance of Jamaica Plain Woman Causes Uneasiness

Boston, July 27.—The disappearance of Mrs. Lillian C. Nickerson of Jamaica Plain has caused a great deal of mystery. Some say that she committed suicide—some say that she was the victim of foul play.

She has been traced aboard one of the Joy liners at Providence. She was aboard the boat when it sailed Thursday evening, July 20.

When the boat arrived in New York she failed to leave it, as far as can be learned. She had given the purser her money—some $40 and her jewelry. In her stateroom was found her hat and her bag.

The "Pure Milk" Problem

It is to be regretted that the milk situation in Massachusetts must continue to be a football of politics just as the tariff situation is a football of politics at Washington. We have commented several times upon the multiplicity of laws seeking to control and regulate the supply of milk in Massachusetts. The so-called "Ellis Bill", which the Governor has just vetoed, would add one more to the statute book, and to those who have looked into it carefully, there seems to be a pretty general idea that it would result in giving to the consumers a better quality of milk than they now have. There also seems to be a pretty general opinion that a better quality of milk, brought about under the Ellis law, would cost the consumer more than it does at the present time. Mr. Ellis himself is one of the largest, if not the largest, milk producer in Massachusetts. He sells his product exclusively to the Newton people who are able to pay for a high grade of milk, and who do not object to the eleven or twelve cents a quart that he charges, but it cannot be overlooked that any law that would promise to make the price of milk twelve cents a quart, and in bringing about that condition drive out of business many worthy farmers who probably produce a pure article of milk even though it does not come up to all the requirements that should be insisted upon by a finicky Board of Health, is open to considerable objection. If the bill should be passed over the Governor's veto, it would be interesting to observe whether or not results do follow such as have been predicted by grangers, many leading farmers, the larger milk producers, and many others.

Lawrence an Example

Two of our distinguished Boston contemporaries, both of them inclined to be of an independent turn of mind, take very different views of the legislation now pending that provides for the creation of a State Finance Commission. The Journal rejoices that there is likelihood of the passage of the bill that has been reported by the Ways and Means Committee. The Herald deplores the passage of this bill on the ground that to enact it into law would provide a Commission that would become a joke in the Commonwealth. Of course, this is quite possible, but it would not be very difficult, if a State Finance Commission were in operation at the present time, for such a commission to prove its worth or lack of it by taking up one single problem that is now foremost in the minds of students in municipal government in Massachusetts.

It is possible that a State Finance Commission might not be able to cope with the serious problem confronting the city of Lawrence. If it did successfully cope with that problem, and make of itself such a force as to give the public confidence in it, it would justify its existence by that one case. Following the line of argument used by the Herald, that it would be unable to attend to more than a very small part of the business brought before it, one might suggest that because all crime is not detected, the police force should be abolished.

It is quite probable that the measure now under consideration will not fully realize all that its friends hope for, and will require many and important amendments after it has been in operation a short time, but it certainly does promise some relief through such oversight as it would be possible for it to give to even the flagrant cases in the Commonwealth.

Strangling New England Industry

The tariff discussion at Washington does not show a very full appreciation of the possible results that may follow enactment, so far as New England is concerned. When the Democratic leader boldly announces that the result of the tariff bill will be the increase of revenues received from the imports of cotton goods, by nearly thirty million dollars a year, he insults the intelligence of the average mill worker if he assumes that the average mill worker isn't going to at once realize that such an increased revenue means a loss to the American cotton worker of practically three times that amount in business during that particular year. It is a pretty serious problem that the woolen and the cotton man have to face in the present agitation for tariff reform at Washington. The general opinion seems to be that no legislation will be passed, but it is difficult to hazard a guess upon the work that any legislative body may perform in these days when party loyalty no longer means anything, and when it is impossible for men to act together as a responsible party organization. The progressives among the Republicans and among the Democrats, represent nothing but individual opinions used for advertising purposes solely. It is undoubtedly true that the agitation of certain ideas by men who may call themselves "progressives" or insurgents or any other name frequently results in important advance in the work of good government. But how long is responsible government to be assured, in the face of the many revolts against party platforms and party leadership in which the individual asserts his own ideas?

Andover in Midst of War

The average layman can't see much use in the carryings on such as we have had in Andover during the past week. Yet there probably is considerable to be gained by such manoeuvers as the Massachusetts militia have been through in the imaginary warfare carried on with Andover as a centre. From appearances it would seem as if Andover had had the best of the whole affair, and there have been several very picturesque and interesting incidents associated with the war of the "Reds" and the "Blues." For example, one of the prettiest sights seen for a long time was that made by the camping militia in the old golf grounds near Rabbit's Pond Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The setting of the section is superb for almost any picture, and the brown tents and martial air pervading the whole camp after it was established, made it an interesting scene.

Governor Foss entertained Gen. Frederick D. Grant at the Inn on Thursday noon at luncheon, and a distinguished party of military officers made up the Governor's guests at that time. War as carried on in this neighborhood during the past week is certainly very different from that described by the distinguished General Sherman, but probably it has succeeded in teaching some interesting lessons, and we know it has succeeded in giving a deal of entertainment to observers and observed.

There has been considerable rejoicing on the part of friends of the administration and earnest advocates of reciprocity with Canada, over the enactment of the recent reciprocity legislation in the national congress. Of course, it is possible that the result of this legislation will be a lowering of prices for many of the commodities entering into the daily requirements of the New England family. But there are many people who believe that the net result of all this long agitation for reciprocity will be nothing more nor less than the realization of a fond dream and the sentimental satisfaction to follow. We have believed that the New England farmer will be a loser, but to no such extent as to deprive him of a continued good living. In the final balance of accounts it is even quite possible that he will have enough compensating advantages to offset the possible loss.

It is doubtful if Andover has a full appreciation of the wonderful blessing which Haggett's Pond is to the town. In all this dry spell while the Pond shows some lowering, there has never been a suggestion of difficulty in Andover's water supply. Not only is it ample, but it is of a superb quality and it grows not one whit less satisfactory as the years go by. It was a wise piece of investigation and engineering when the town approved its present system of water supply, and there are many reasons why there should be felt a deal of gratitude to those who were important in this original work.

25 — Cents — 25

The success of the special sales at the Andover Bookstore has made quite a summer business. The twenty-five cent sale has been especially attractive to buyers, and will be continued for another week, with a number of new and attractive bargains placed on the round table next Monday morning.

The goods being sold are nearly all staple goods and there are some very desirable trades in stationery and books that show a large saving to the purchaser..

Cricket

The Andover Cricket club engaged the Beverly Cricket club at Andover last Saturday. Andover batted first and were all out for a total of 40 runs, C. Fettes having 11 runs. The Beverly team were pretty steady batters. Holt, who opened with Johnston made a good stand getting 22 runs before he was bowled by J. Fettes. The Beverly inning closed with 64 runs, thus winning a very pleasant game by 24 runs. After the game the Andover boys entertained the visitors. Following are the scores:

THE CENTRE OF WAY

Andover Invaded by the "Blue" Army, Skirmishes Frequent and Captures Made on Streets

Andover was a very lively place on Wednesday when the soldiers of the "Blue" and the "Red" armies made it the centre of attack and one of the most coveted positions to capture in the entire war. Things were stirring all day around the square and reports of battles and skirmishes here and there in the outskirts of the town kept the small boys as well as grown ups on the jump so as not to miss anything that might be in the line of war.

Rumors that Andover would be one of the main points of attack by the "Blues" kept most of the town in an anxious frame of mind. No one wanted to miss seeing the soldier boys and as early as Tuesday night hundreds of persons walked to Rabbits' pond and over Salem street to see if any of the advance guard had arrived. Reports down town early in the afternoon that the "Blues" would camp on the golf links around Rabbits' pond took many there, but no signs of the soldiers were found.

Early on Wednesday morning the khaki uniform could be seen on the streets frequently, and by eight o'clock word came that the main body of "Blues" would pass through the town. By half past eight the first companies arrived from Tewksbury, via Central street, and proceeded up Elm street to Wilson's corner. Here the tents were pitched for the night and the boys were ready for the rest. Over one thousand people visited the camp during the evening and were shown about the camp by the soldier boys.

Early Thursday morning the camp was broken up and the "Blues" moved on to Boxford where they spent Thursday night preparatory to the battle which is expected to take place today.

There were many interesting incidents connected with the soldiers' trip through Andover. While the "Blues" were passing through the square, two "Red" spies were stationed on a lawn in Main street. They were equipped with field glasses and were evidently procuring important facts for the "Red" General.

Another incident which caused considerable excitement was the capture of about twenty "Blue" rear guard by the "Red" cavalry. The latter marched into Andover square by way of Main street about half an hour after the "Blue" had departed. The rear guard was unaware of the presence of the "Reds" and at the corner of Essex and Central streets they met. The "Blues" being greatly outnumbered were easily caught, but after some fighting in which several shots were fired. A few of the "Blues" made their escape by hiding behind one of the houses on Central street.

The "Red" cavalry missed one of the most important captures that could have easily been made and which would have been the most important event of the war. This squadron of cavalry sat around in Andover square while within a block from them, lying in a barber's chair Gen. Emery P. Clark of the "Blue" army unattended by his staff was quietly being shaved. When the troopers found how near they had missed making a capture which would have been flashed to every city of the country, they were a disappointed lot. General Clark calmly waited until the shaving was over and then rode away laughing.

One important capture was, however, made by the "Reds" A trooper captured Sergt. Lovering of Troop B, Blue cavalry, and he proved to be a prize.

Burglars on High Street

Early Monday morning, the home of Dr. Fred Bickell on High street was visited by sneak thieves or burglars who tried to gain an entrance by means of a false key. They were scared away, however, before gaining admission and nothing has been missed from the premises.

About one o'clock in the morning, Guy Bickell, Dr. Bickell's son had occasion to go down stairs when he heard the sound of a key in the front door. He investigated further and found that a man was at the door trying hard to get in. He immediately awakened other members of the family, and although they were frightened by the thought of a burglar in the house, a search was made but without results.

The police were notified by telephone and Officers Napier and Morse went quickly to the scene. Chief Mears was reached at his home and he also responded. After a long search about the grounds in the neighborhood without a trace of the burglars, the hunt was given up.

Wedding

GEYER—ROGGERMAN

A very pretty and quiet wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roggerman on Elm street Wednesday evening, when their only daughter, Miss Martha, became the wife of Albert Francis Geyer of Lawrence. The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock by Rev. F. R. Shipman of the South church in the presence of a few friends and relatives of the young couple. They were unattended.

After the wedding, a reception was held at which friends and relatives were present from Andover, Lawrence, Haverhill, Methuen, and Boston. The happy couple received many beautiful presents. After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Geyer left for a short wedding tour to New York.

I. O. G. T. Notes

At the regular meeting of Andover Lodge held on Tuesday evening, one candidate was initiated and three names proposed for membership. Visitors were present from Boston who gave interesting talks on the Good of the Order. Sisters Henderson and Guthrie of the Junior Temple played piano solos which were much enjoyed by the members. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: C. T., Robert Auchterlonie; V. T., Sister Libby; Secretary, Alfred Lundgren; F. S., Brother Libby; T., Brother Turner; Chaplain, Sister Spicer; M., Brother Auchterlonie; Recorder, Sister Grant; Pianist, Sister Mary Haddon.

Royals Win at Tewksbury

The Royals defeated the Doctors and attendants of the Tewksbury Almshouse last Saturday afternoon by the score of 8 to 6. The game was played at Tewksbury and was witnessed by a large number of inmates of the institution who supported their team loyally.

The first three innings of the game settled the fate of the Tewksbury team for during that time the Royals made all of their runs. The doctors were shut out until the fifth inning when two runs were scored. In the next inning one more was added and in the following inning the score was enlarged by two. In the ninth inning their last run was made.

Briggs started in the box for the doctors but proved easy for the local boys and in the fifth inning he was relieved by Neal Cronin, a Ballardvale boy. Cronin pitched a great game for the remaining four innings and allowed only two hits. O'Connell pitched well for the Royals but at times had ragged support. Errors were frequent on both teams, those by the Royals being especially serious, as most of Tewksbury's runs were made from misplays. Bowman was the star batter, getting a home run and two singles.

Following the game the team and the local supporters made a tour through the almshouse on the invitation of Mr. Cronin. Every courtesy was shown the party by the doctors and attendants and everyone was pleased with the opportunity of inspecting the great institution.

Andover Gains at Medford's Expense

Andover, this summer has gained a new resident in Marquis M. Converse, who has bought the D'Arcy farm, and with his family is now occupying the same. Mr. Converse has for many years been a resident of Medford and it was with deep regret that its citizens learned that they were to lose him, for that city has looked to him for leadership in civic and charitable affairs.

To him was due the success of the Citizens' Association, which has given the city a clean business government for the past few years. Mr. Converse was active in organizing the Boy's Union and was at the head of the High School Athletic Association.

In business, Mr. Converse is President of the Converse Rubber Shoe Company, which has a large factory in Malden and Andover is to be congratulated in gaining such a public spirited citizen.

"MEDFORD"

Tiny Republics.

Klein-Alp is a diminutive republic tucked away between Switzerland and France. Only in summer is the republic inhabited and then by miners and cowgirls. There is one hotel, closed during the winter. Another little republic is in Tyrol, between Austria and Italy, and in long gone years was under the jurisdiction of first a king and then an emperor. But in the adjustment of frontier lines the state of Val di Ventino was in some way overlooked, and it promptly organized itself into a lilliputian republic. It has now about 2,000 inhabitants living in six villages. Neither Val di Ventino nor Klein-Alp has any taxes. There are no officials or compulsory military services. The only industry of Val di Ventino, aside from the farming of small fields, is charcoal burning.

His Tribute of Respect.

The freckle faced boy who was about to be emancipated from high school thraldom was writing his graduating essay.

"I suppose I ought to wind it up," he reflected, "with something touching and sentimental about the leather headed, snub nosed, squeaky voiced, conceited old snoozer that runs the shebang."

Thereupon he wrote, "And now, our dear and honored principal, we turn to you," etc.—Chicago Tribune.

The Translation.

Toole, the great English comedian, was once greatly tickled at finding in a French provincial town a poster announcing a translation of "Walker, London," the farce which he himself had made famous. The adapter had translated the title as "Londres qui se promene," or "London which goes out for walks."

Fact or Fiction?

"The trouble with these literary clubs," said a captious critic, "is that they always degenerate into meetings for the exchange of gossip."

"True enough," replied an enthusiastic member, "but how can you expect anything else when facts are so much stranger than fiction?"

A Gentle Reminder.

John—I understand Dashleigh's uncle has died, leaving him a fortune.

Tom—Yes; he has received a great many congratulations. Why, even his tailor sent him a bunch of forgetmenots yesterday.—London Mail.

The Only Way Out.

Peter (sent for the milk)—Oh, mercy, I've drunk too much of it! What shall we do? Small Brother—Easy. We'll drop the jug.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

THE HOUSE OF THE SQUARE DEAL

YIELDED TO EDMUNDS.

Cleveland's Political Foe Won After His Friends Had Failed.

Soon after Mr. Cleveland entered the White House in 1885 Vice President Hendricks died at his home in Indianapolis, and the president made arrangements to attend the funeral. Many of his social intimates and all his official advisers united in an effort to dissuade him from making this twenty hour journey, enlarging on the manifold risks of rail travel at all times and the special opportunity this would offer some fanatic to assassinate him. But he remained immovable until within a few hours of the time set for closing up his business he received an unexpected call from Senator Edmunds of Vermont.

Mr. Edmunds was the leader of the Republican side of the senate and was understood to have in preparation several measures of opposition to the announced policies of the new administration. But he was also and above all else an American citizen and a patriot, and his visit to his political foe was made in that character. In a conversation of less than half an hour, in which he drew the curtain over all differences and disregarded all empty formalities of intercourse, he laid before the president in the clear terms and logical order in which he knew so well how to express himself the larger aspects of the situation.

As the presidential succession law then stood the speaker of the house of representatives stood next in line to the vice president, and next to him came the president pro tempore of the senate. The house not having organized since the inauguration, no speaker had been elected, and, the senate having failed at its special session to choose a president pro tempore to serve during the recess, only one life—that of the president himself—stood between the nation and administrative anarchy; hence, argued Mr. Edmunds, it was Mr. Cleveland's duty to forego every other consideration and invite no chances of throwing upon the country they both loved a strain such as it had never been subjected to before.

The writer of these lines was seated in the next room while this visit was in progress, and he will never forget the president's expression of satisfaction on coming out of his office after the senator had gone. He gave orders at once that all preparations for his journey should be suspended and declared that nothing that had occurred since he entered the White House had so touched him as the kind solicitude shown by Mr. Edmunds about his exposing himself to any peril now. The others who had reasoned with him on the subject were men who were presumptively friendly and whose chief anxiety seemed to be lest he should suffer some injury to his individual person or fortunes. But here was a man who, as far as politics was concerned, was a hostile of hostiles, yet who appealed to him in behalf of the American people and their government.

"That settled it," Mr. Cleveland concluded as he turned to go back to his office. "After what Edmunds said there can be no further question of where my highest obligation lies."—F. E. L. in New York Post.

McDOUGALL'S MUSINGS

Tact

An old Scotch proverb tells us that it is better to flatter a fool than "fecht" him. How much of the fighting, since this world came into existence might have been avoided by tact, no one can tell. The awful catastrophy of the 1870 war between France and Germany came to pass because when the French ambassador in Berlin was walking past a German official, the German man did not salute him by the usual courtesy of lifting his hat. I do not say that this incident was the sole cause of the war, but this simple want of tact set France in a rage.

Queen Victoria and her husband had the good sense to have this quality of tact and when living in Scotland they went to the little Presbyterian parish kirk. Kind Edward had the same kind of good sense, and when he visited Paris he walked to the English kirk service. The man they now call George the Fifth, when there was a thanksgiving service in the autumn of last year, put on a Stewart tartan kilt and with his family joined in the old psalm:

"Let fields rejoice and everything that springeth from the earth;
Then woods and ev'ry tree shall sing
with gladness and with mirth."

Some people will say, "well what about it; if King George chooses to sing along with the people in the Highland glen, let him sing." True, but these little things to us trifling have endeared the Queen, her children and her grand-children to the Scottish people. Last week, when after the coronation "Circus" the King, with his wife and family went over to Ireland and got a taste of Irish loyalty, on Sunday after worshipping in the Episcopalian St. Patrick's Cathedral, George took a run down 20 miles to Maynooth Roman Catholic training college and had a cup of tea, and I hope a taste of Irish whiskey with the Archbishop, and visited their hospital and other buildings. By this simple tactful visit, the King has done more to win the affection of the warm hearted Irish people than all the Home rule measures his government could give in red tape form. The little alterations in the wording of the coronation oath made it possible for the King to visit Maynooth. The majority of the Irish people are Roman Catholics and are not all ignorant as many of our half educated Protestants in this country are apt to think.

The Duke of Norfolk, the grand master of court and coronation ceremonies is one of the best bred gentlemen in Europe who also happens to be a Roman Catholic. His wife who was one of the beautiful women at the ceremony, put to shame the low bred hobble skirt woman who thinks that wearing diamonds makes a lady.

To go from Royalty to a servant girl to show what tact is, let me tell about "Eliza." She was seven years with us, one of fourteen children, born and reared in a canal boat and her mother with Eliza and the other grown up girls were the chief motive power on that boat. A broad leather strap attached to a rope was the driving gear, only this leather strap was put over the head of a girl, not a horse or mule, and the mother and her daughters took turns about with their father night and day on the tow paths and pulled the boat. This out door exercise gave Eliza what they call a grand bust. I never saw a girl with so broad, srtong shoulders. She could neither read nor write. When she left us she could do both. She was married to "Carl" and she would not marry him until their united savings bought a boat of their own. But to return to the story about Eliza's tact. A friend of mine who was over 30 years with a St. Petersburg firm as their flax buyer in Russia, on his way from Dundee to St. Petersburg often took a day or two with me to rest and also sell flax to the French spinners. The first time he stayed a night with me he gave Eliza, along with a Russian coin, a pair of beautiful gloves, light cream color. Eliza thanked Monsieur and said nothing. That night she came to me and said, "My God, Monsieur McDougall, I could not wear these gloves. If I went to church with these gloves on my hands every one would take me for a mauvaise femme—ie. bad woman—I told her that I would get gloves for her the color she wanted, in exchange for these fine Russian gloves. What tact. What care of her character this girl had. An American girl can scarcely understand this glove story.

Another instance of the good sense and tact of Eliza I give to show how careful she was of her character. Ostend is a great place for promiscuous sea bathing. Hundreds of both sexes join hands and let the waves roll over them. Eliza, being brought up on a canal boat, could swim as she truly said, like a water rat. I thought I could swim until I tried to beat Eliza and got winded and faint and she had to come to help me by putting one hand under my chin and swimming with one hand, until she brought me to water where I got bottom. Her remark to me about this was, "Madame must not know about this, she might be jealous." I hope Eliza and Carl have a good boat of their own and a mule to pull their boat. One thing I am sure of is that if Eliza had not assisted me at Ostend, McDougall's Musings in the Townsman would never have been written.

A book I read lately written by a Scotchman, the son of Rev. Mr. Inglas, who had a church at Edgel, near Kerriemuir, tells a good story about the late Queen Victoria and confirms what I have said about her good sense. The Queen, who enjoyed out door life, wished to go to the top of Lochnegar and Jamie Mitchell, an old deer stalker who had been 30 years about Lochnegar, and knew every crevice about the hills, was appointed to lead the pony the Queen rode on. They went to the summit all right, put up a shelter tent and had luncheon. On the way coming down, Jamie, who had taken perhaps a glass too much of Lochnegar whiskey, said, "Mrs. Queen, that is a dam'd stotterin' kind of a beast ye are riding on." The Queen replied, "Well Jamie, we all had Lochnegar whiskey at luncheon."

"Paragon Park and Palm Garden"

Cabaret Show from 9 to 11. A new popular feature for the Summer Crowds

Always the first to introduce novelties in the way of summer amusement, Manager Dodge has now instituted the cabaret idea in the Palm Garden at Paragon Park, at Nantasket Beach, borrowing the plan which is so popular in New York. New York, by the way, borrows the idea from Paris and Vienna. As a matter of fact, the Palm Garden has always had what was practically a cabaret show, for after all it only means that guests while dining are entertained by singers, or dancing or other amusement features. The attractive feature of the Palm Garden has always been that one might enjoy the menu and wine list while listening to the alternating band and orchestra concerts, the various singers, the gree circus acts on the lagoon, and the fire works display on Wednesday and Saturday nights, but these entertainment features have always been in the regular place, either in the band stand or the balcony of the Palm Garden. The new scheme is to vary the entertainment by having the singers at the tables to sing at the most unexpected moment. You may be in the midst of your dinner and suddenly find that the Paragon Male Quartette is sitting at the next table, dining as guests just as you are, and during the coffee and cigars they may break into song. Or Marie Ungvarsky, the soprano soloist, may beg a seat at your table, if the Palm Garden is crowded, as it usually is, and while waiting for her ice cream may sing "I love you honey, dear", or some other such taffy. The Grand Opera Trio too is included in the cabaret entertainment. It is something of a treat to have such singers giving selections from grand opera at the neighboring table during dinner. For a climax sprightly dancing girls pirouette among the tables. The crowds at Paragon are breaking all records this season.

THE END OF TUBERCULOSIS

Civic Loss Through School Sickness.

By DR. LEONARD P. AYRES.

Figures from Germany, England, Sweden and seven American cities indicate that in the average city school system the children who are in need of such treatment as that afforded by the open air schools constitute from 3 to 5 per cent of the entire school membership. This means that Albany, for example, should have open air schools in sufficient numbers to care for 300 children, while New York city needs accommodations for 20,000. When such figures as these are mentioned the objection of expense looms high at once, but it must not be forgotten when we are considering expense that a thousand children of school age die each year of tuberculosis in New York city. On the average they have each had about six years of schooling, for which the city has paid about $250. This means a quarter of a million dollars loss each year in the great city in money expended on educating children who die of tuberculosis before growing up. A quarter of a million dollars a year spent in open air schools designed to prevent this frightful waste would go far toward meeting the entire expense.

HOTEL BEDS ABROAD.

To Get Into Some of Them One Has to Use a Stepladder.

The European bed always strikes the uninitiated American traveler as a huge joke. In France they commence to impress him with their height and narrowness, and he looks dubiously at the enormous Turkey red cotton "couvre pied" of eiderdown, which seems something like a mountain, and he wonders how he is ever going to bear all that extra weight on his person. But when he has slipped between the sheets and the grateful warmth communicates itself to his cold bones—if it is winter they are sure to be like icicles—he discovers that it is deceptively light and deliciously comfortable.

In Switzerland the beds attain a little more height, but it is in Germany that they become of such an altitude as to necessitate a pair of steps to mount them. One tourist, finding that one leg of the stepladder was broken, solved his difficulty by going to the extreme end of the room, taking a running start and landing with a flying leap in the midst of the Turkey red eiderdown. He crawled in under the crocheted counterpane and was soon fast asleep. Some time in the night he became sleepily aware of a consuming thirst and started to get out of bed for a drink. A startled shriek, followed by some swear words that even the thick headed German watchman understood, penetrated to the remotest chamber in the inn.

"I was half awake," he explained afterward, "and had been dreaming of standing on Table rock, in the Yosemite. I started to get out of bed—and began to fall. Naturally I supposed I was plunging to the bottom of that precipice, and I'll leave it to you if any one wouldn't have let out a yell when he thought he was going to be dashed to death."

Sometimes in European hotels the tourist is taken solemnly to one side and told that by paying a few francs or lire more he can have the royal bedchamber. A certain hotel in Sorrento, where a dozen or more royal heads have lain in one season, is even more generous, for if the rooms are empty they make no extra charge. And the traveler loves to recount when he is back on his native heath how his cheek pressed the same pillow that had been used by the little queen of Holland or the king of Saxony.—New York Tribune.

A Turkish Love Story.

A Turk knocked at his beloved's door, and a voice answered from within, "Who is there?"

Then he answered, "It is I."

Then the voice said, "This house will not hold thee and me."

And the door was not opened.

Then went the lover into the desert, where there is nothing but Allah, and fasted and prayed in solitude.

And after a year he returned and knocked again at the door.

And again the voice asked, "Who is there?"

And he said, "It is thyself."

And the door was opened to him.

D'Orsay and His Tailor.

"D'Orsay, the Complete Dandy," as Mr. Tiegnmouth Shore calls him in his biography, was fully aware of the value of his patronage to the tailors. When clothes arrived for him, in the most mysterious manner banknotes had found their way into the pockets. Once, when this accident had not happened, D'Orsay bade his valet return the garments with the message that "the lining of the pockets had been forgotten."

The Old, Old Story.

"What did you do when your husband told you the old, old story?"

"I told him to shut up before he was half through."

"Why, what a funny way to reply to a confession of love!"

"Oh, is that what you mean? I thought you meant the story he told last night when he came home from a time with the boys."—Houston Post.

Her Strong Chin.

Dawson—The facial features plainly indicate character and disposition. In selecting your wife were you governed by her chin? Spenlow—No, but I have been ever since we were married.

A Case of Necessity.

"Why are you breaking up housekeeping?"

"My wife's florist says she'll have to take the rubber plant to a different climate."—Washington Herald.

Soft Toned Bells of China.

The natives of China use large bells of their own make in many of their temples and monasteries. I have noticed all through Japan and China that the tone of the monastery and temple bells is very soft and smooth, due to the superior quality of the material used in their manufacture and to the absence of iron clappers, the result being a marvelous softness and mellowness of tone. The bells are never swung, being always suspended in a fixed frame, and the sound is produced by striking them on the outer edge with a wooden mallet. This makes the soft tones which are so delightfully melodious.—Consular Reports.

Dr. Holmes' Wit.

One of the best repartees ever credited to a habitual maker of happy phrases was that made by the beloved "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" on a certain social occasion.

Going to dine with a Boston neighbor, Dr. Holmes was met by her with an apology:

"I could not get another man. We are four women, and you will have to take us all in."

"Forewarned is fourarmed," he said with a bow.

LAWRENCE

The ladies of the G. A. R. are holding an outing at Salisbury beach today. They have been invited out by Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Breen.

Miss Anna T. Mulholland, head of the commercial department at the local high school, has returned after spending two weeks at Salisbury beach as the guest of Miss Mary A. Driscoll.

Supt. John Reynolds of the public property department and his driver, Robert McCarthy, had a narrow escape from serious injury about 7.45 o'clock Monday morning, when they were hurled out of a light driving team at the corner of Lowell and Oxford streets by the breaking of the front axle.

Mrs. Thomas H. Redmond of Haverhill street has returned from Sunapee Lake. At a progressive whist party, Mrs. Redmond was fortunate in winning first prize, a Japanese importation consisting of a centerpiece and six doylies. In honor of the event she tendered the guests a chafing dish luncheon.

Attachments for $5000 and $3000 were filed in the local registry of deeds Tuesday in suits brought against the Boston & Northern Street Railway company through the office of Bradley and Dooley. Joseph H. Jones sues for $5000 and Frank Couture for $3000, seeking damages for personal injuries.

While working on a staging at the new Uswoco mills on South Broadway, Monday morning about 7.45 o'clock, Albert Wooles of 30 Front street, fell from the fourth story to the ground and miraculously escaped serious injury. He was taken to the General hospital in the police ambulance and later removed to his home.

The police have received several complaints of milk thievery in the vicinity of Cross, Tremont and Oak streets, and an officer has been detailed to watch in that locality early in the morning for such thieves. The milk has been stolen early in the morning and yesterday a woman saw a boy take some milk from her door. Several of the milk dealers have also complained that milk has been stolen from the houses early in the morning after they deliver it.

The missionary meetings of Mrs. J. M. Macfarlane at the mission home on Broadway, corner of Green street have come in for considerable comment from the residents in that section who appealed to City Marshal O'Sullivan to have the meetings stopped. Mrs. Macfarlane conducts the Lighthouse mission on Broadway but recently has held open air meetings on Green street. The residents in that neighborhood have complained to the police, claiming that sessions run very far into the evening.

WHEN THE TRADERS COME TO BAT

The Printers on the Run, Lose Game to Business Men. Great Interest in Series

Say!
Could they play?

Alas, Nay!
Not in a way
That would pay
A Magnate,
To inflate
His bank roll
Into toll
To buy releases
Of those pieces of what once
A week ago,
Or so,
Posed near and far,
Each a star,
Never to fall
In baseball,
From Pinnacle tall.
—Would this were all!

But say!
'Twas a week and a day,
When the way
To play
Was shown those crusaders
By the traders.

Base invaders!
Of the realm
Where the helm
Is a bat;
And the compass
Is a ball.
Where the winner
Of today
May tomorrow
Take a fall.

Cap. Crowley always good for a hit

The Press,
I guess,
Would confess
That the mess
Came about
In and out,
All because
At the well
There fell
Every pitcher that they sent
H—bent
For a rep.

But alas!
With arms of glass
They gave a pass
First to one and
Then another;
Then his brother.

And his mother
Could have had one too,
If she knew
Enough
Of stuff,
And snuff,
To keep still
While the pill
Sailed high or low
Swift or slow.

But across the plate
I must relate,
It seldom went
By pitcher sent.

The umpire?
I insist
He missed
His vocation,
In relation
To the early publication
Of a book
How the hook
Isn't used
Or abused,
When at times
In all climes
A misfit
Is made "it".

Nothing got by Jimmie Green

Now the Press
(I confess
Under duress)
Were not the same
In their game,
That they were when wreaths of laurel crowned their brows.
They couldn't pitch,
Or catch,
Or scratch
A hit, or run.
In fact for six innings
Their winnings
Made Maroney
Look looney,
While Cap Coutts'
Long suits
Were one
By one
Undone.

But those traders!
By cripes!
What swipes
They did
Occasionally give that lively sphere.
First was T.
Mor-ris-see
Who would swat
'Cross the lot
Red hot!
A neat hit that would surely bring a score.

Then B.
Crow-lee
In the way
He'd play
A former day,
Would come back with a swipe good for more.

And Jimmy Green
A "Has B-e-e-n"?
Well I guess nit
He's it,
With a hit
Or an out,
When it comes
To the way
To play
The great National game.

But those invaders
Weren't all traders
In clothes
And hose.

There were two docs,
In light socs,
Who could hit
Just a bit;
And run?
Why I swun
When Ternen Mac
Got a whack,
He was clear round
That ground
So quick you'd blink,
And think,
"Can it be
That's he
Who a day or so ago
Riz
From rheu-matiz?"

That baker
Out in centre,
Set a pace
To disgrace
A Tris Speaker
When it comes to setting baskets for a fly.

While Nally (Mac)
Came back
At play
In a way
To assure his partners he was far from getting by.

Maroney "in Form"

But say you!
Just take a view
Of that bunch,
And the hunch,
The Press took
On inning seven
With scores eleven
And coming strong
Right along;
Every man a batting in the gilt.
Those traders
(Base invaders)
On the run,
All undone.
Two more innings
With such a brace,
Would replace
Near disgrace
With another scalp a hanging at the hilt.

But Nay
They say
"We wont play"
(And in truth that's the way they'd agreed to when begun.)

So now
On the brow
Of another lot of victors rests the wreath.

They're pretty stiff
And if
They are wise,
They will
Keep still
And hold their victor's broadsword in its sheath.

Borrowed to Save.

Uncle Reuben, the village whitewasher and man of all work, was a frequent borrower of small sums from his neighbor, Colonel Arkwright, and as a rule he repaid these little debts at the appointed time. But on one occasion when he had been accommodated with a loan of $2.50, which he promised to return in a few days, he allowed two or three weeks to pass without making any mention of his indebtedness and, in fact, seemed to avoid his creditor. But one morning the colonel unexpectedly encountered him at the postoffice.

"Hello, Uncle Rube! Didn't you borrow a little money from me several weeks ago?"

"Dat's right, cunnel," said the old man. "I sholy did."

"You told me you'd pay it back in three or four days. Have you had bad luck?"

"No, suh," responded Uncle Reuben. "I'll tell you how it was, cunnel. I lacked jes' two dollahs an' a half o' havin' ten dollahs to put in de savin's bank, an' I used it fo' dat. It's all right, cunnel. I won't fo'git it."—Youth's Companion.

Insane English Monarchs.

George III. is the only British monarch who in modern times has been placed under restraint and deprived of his authority because of insanity, though similar measures were at one time contemplated with regard to his son, George IV., the monarch who has been described as "a bad son, a bad husband, a bad father, a bad subject, a bad monarch and a bad friend" and whose conduct while on the throne was characterized by an eccentricity which bordered on lunacy.

The insanity of George III. was really brought about by the dangerous illness of his youngest and favorite child, Princess Amelia. The unlikelihood of her recovery preyed upon him and hastened the attack of mental derangement which incapacitated him from reigning, although he had previously suffered from this malady. He died hopelessly insane at Windsor after losing his sight as well as his senses.—Pearson's.

The Difference.

It was at an afternoon concert, and in the stalls sat a smartly dressed girl and the young man who deemed her the most precious jewel of the universe. Behind them sat a couple of the type of concert goers who came rather to discuss the audience than listen to the music.

"Look at that girl just in front of us," commented one in a very audible whisper. "She's shop assistant at L.'s. I should like to know what business she has at a gathering of this sort. And just look at her hat! She served me the other day with the one I am wearing, and I suppose she persuades herself that there is no difference between it and mine. I never"—

The girl in front turned with a crimson face.

"Oh, yes, madam, there's a difference," she said quietly; "mine is paid for."—London Tit-Bits.

Irving's Modesty.

Fuller Mellish, who was for several years in the company of Sir Henry Irving, first coming to America in his support, told a characteristic story of the great English actor.

"We were discussing Tennyson in the beefsteak room of the Lyceum one night," said Mr. Mellish, "when Sir Henry came over and joined in the conversation. 'Ah, yes,' he said, 'Tennyson. To be sure I know him. Clever chap, yes, but vain. One night Tennyson and I were walking down Piccadilly together, and as we passed a crowd on the street corner several of the men took off their hats and bowed. Ha! Do you know Tennyson thought they were bowing to him. Extraordinary! Yes, clever chap, but vain, you know.'"
